Chapter 4: Data collection and analysis

4.1 Gaining permission for access to the co-researchers
4.2 Selecting dialogue partners
4.3 Ethical issues
4.4 Participating in a dialogue
4.5 Data analysis
4.6 Writing up the findings
4.7 Summary

Chapter 5: Findings

5.1 The analytical framework
5.2 An overview of the findings
5.3 The construct of the essential structure
  5.3.1 Mothering a child with mental illness
    5.3.1.1 Out of uncertainty
    5.3.1.2 Struggling through 5.3.1.3 Doing one's job
    5.3.1.4 A strong bond
  5.3.2 Empowerment or disempowerment
    5.3.2.1 Support from spouse and family
    5.3.2.2 Support from mental health workers
    5.3.2.3 Lack of support from spouse and family
    5.3.2.4 Lack of support from mental health workers
  5.3.3 Living with the unexpected
    5.3.3.1 Coping with daily life
    5.3.3.2 Longing for normality
    5.3.3.3 Nurturing oneself
    5.3.3.4 Holding on
  5.3.4 Experience of the school system
    5.3.4.1 Positive interactions
    5.3.4.2 Lack of resources
  5.4 Summary
Chapter 6: Discussion

6.1 Mothering a child with mental illness
6.2 Empowerment or disempowerment
6.3 Living with the unexpected
6.4 Experience of the school system
6.5 Conclusion of the discussion
6.6 Limitations and strengths
6.7 Implications for practice
6.8 Implications for research

References

Table 1       The formal data analysis steps of the Vancouver School
Table 2       The seven major points of consent forms according to Seidman
Table 3       The characteristics of the sample as revealed in the dialogues

Appendices

Appendix I       The Vancouver School of Doing Phenomenology

Appendix II   a) Notification to the Data Protection Authority – English version
              b) Notification to the Data Protection Authority – Icelandic version

Appendix III  a) Approval from the Bioethics Committee – English version
              b) Approval from the Bioethics Committee – Icelandic version

Appendix IV    a) Permission from the Nurse Director – English version
               b) Permission from the Nurse Director – Icelandic version

Appendix V     a) Permission from the Charge Nurse at the outpatient ward – English version
               b) Permission from the Charge Nurse at the outpatient ward – Icelandic version Appendix VI  a) Permission from the Charge Nurse at the inpatient ward – English version
              b) Permission from the Charge Nurse at the inpatient ward – Icelandic version Appendix VII  a) Permission from the Chief Physician – English version

              b) Permission from the Chief Physician – Icelandic version

Appendix VIII a) Information about the study to the co-researchers – English version
               b) Information about the study to the co-researchers – Icelandic version Appendix IX   a) Informed consent form – English version

              b) Informed consent form – Icelandic version Appendix X    a) A letter to mental health professionals – English version

              b) A letter to mental health professionals – Icelandic version